

HI, I'M CAYDEN

Cayden Brown is a 19-year-old child rights defender and award-winning activist. After his parents' divorce at six, he learned what it meant to have life-altering decisions made without his voice. Determined to let no other child feel silenced in a courtroom, he became a Teen Court defense attorney at just 16. Today, he brings that mission to the world's largest platforms, advocating for a justice system that truly listens to the voices of young people.

I first saw Cayden speak at a conference in New York and was encouraged by his unique story and perspective. I approached him afterward and invited him to guest lecture the class I teach at Harvard. One student shared that she felt so full after his presentation and that the session ended on such a positive note. I would love to have him back at the same time every year!

Lynette Nicole Tannis, Ed.D.
Adjunct Professor, Harvard Graduate School of Education

Most Requested Keynotes

Stop Asking For Permission

A Better World Is Not Checking for ID

When Kids Lead the Courtroom™

What Happens When We Decide

What Is Your Why?

Reclaiming Our Stories. A Choice That Changes Lives